CORONER TO HOLD INQUEST TO-DAY

H. M. Smith, Jr., Engaged to Defend Freardrie, Charged With Serious Crime.

H. M. Smith, Jr., who has been retained by Antonio Freardrie, held by the police on the charge of performing a criminal operation, which Coroner Taylor has said resulted in the death of Mrs. Rosa Inez Stagg, wife of J. Tillden Stagg, a painter, of 11 Government Road, Fulton, last Friday night, said last night that he would not discuss the case until after the inquest this morning at 10 o'clock. The coroner's jury and witnesses have been summoned to appear at the office of Dr. Taylor in the basement of the City Hall at 10 o'clock.

Commonwealth's Attorney Minnie Folkes, who will prosecute the case, said that he did not care to discuss it at the present time, but he is hard at work preparing himself to assist in giving Freardrie, who is known among the negro population of the city as a "herb doctor," the maximum penalty for the crime of which he is accused. There were few developments yesterday, but there is little question that the horrible crime of which he is accused will be firmly fixed upon the alleged malpractitioner.

Freardrie was removed yesterday morning from the First Police Station to the Henrico County Jail, as the City Jail is under quarantine due to the outbreak there several days ago of smallpox.

A crowd of more than fifty people was on hand to get a glimpse of the negro as he was placed behind the bars.

It is expected that the coroner's office will be packed with eager spectators when the inquest is begun this morning. Many witnesses will be called, but the principal testimony against Freardrie, it is understood, will be given by the husband of the dead woman.

DUKE OF BRAGANZA WELL KNOWN IN WEST

At Castle of Seebenstein Many Trophies of American Chase.

BY LA MARQUESE DE FONTENAY.

Smith's son-in-law, the Duc de Vizay, nor yet his younger brother, the somewhat unsavory Prince Francis Joseph of Braganza, has ever visited America, their father, the Duke of Braganza, only son of ex-King Miguel of Portugal, has been much in the United States. Though he has mingled but little in society in the big cities, and has never set foot in Newport, yet he is well known in the West, especially in the Rocky Mountain regions and in Alaska, where he has been repeatedly for long weeks together, for the sake of the shooting. At his Castle of Seebenstein, in Austria, he has plenty of trophies of the American chase, including some particularly fine heads and pelts of grizzlies.

Unlike his two sons, he is an officer of the Austrian army, possesses the colonelcy of the Seventh Regiment of Hussars and was a particular friend of the late Crown Prince Rudolf in his younger days. He was a great sportsman, and his friend, the present Prince Kinsky, has figured in the Grand National, which is the principal sportsman's event in England; while for several seasons he hunted with the Kildare fox hounds in Ireland.

His recent reconciliation with ex-King Manuel at Dover, that is to say, the reunion of the two rival branches of the sovereign house of Portugal, is likely to have a very important bearing on the near future events of that unhappy country, where everything seems to be at sixes and sevens; destined to be the marriage of ex-King Manuel to the duke's daughter, Princess Elizabeth, who is a particularly pretty girl, having inherited much of her father's good looks. Mrs. James Henry Smith, as my readers will remember, is the widow and chief heir of "Silent Smith," of New York, a sister of Mrs. Anthony, the divorced wife of W. Rhinelander Stewart, of New York.

King George has just appointed to the rectorship of Sandringham the Rev. Rowland Grant, hitherto Vicar of Great Warley, and a cleric of the best type. He might, however, have continued as such, but he had not been fortunate enough to secure the heart and hand of the Hon. Margaret, daughter of the late Lord Salisbury, who was a favorite maid of honor on terms of intimacy with all of the latter's children.

The Rev. Rowland Grant himself is a son of Canon Charles Grant, of Wells Cathedral, and may be regarded as destined to high preferment; for the rectorship of Sandringham carries with it, not only titular chaplaincy to the King, which is a highly prized office among the clergy, but also, what is more, the domestic chaplaincy of the sovereign; that is to say, he is the chaplain of the entire royal household at Sandringham, and the spiritual adviser of its members, as well as the religious instructor of the royal children. Moreover, owing to his wife, Sandringham Hall, where Queen Alexandra lives, also with Sandringham Cottage, the favorite home of King George and Queen Mary, will be much more intimate than in former cases, owing to the altogether privileged position of the rector's wife among the royal family.

Rowland Grant's next preferment will probably be to the position of Dean of Windsor, which is invariably held by some divine enjoying the personal friendship of the reigning house; and the Deanery of Windsor has on several occasions proved a stepping-stone to the Archbishopric of Canterbury and to the Primacy of All England.

Rowland Grant takes the place at Sandringham of Dean Farrar's unfortunate and misguided son, now a fugitive from justice, and abandoned by all save his devoted Philadelphia wife.

Everything connected with Count Leopold Berchtold, the new Chancellor of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, and the Minister of its Foreign Affairs, must be of interest in view of the important role which he is called upon to play in the concert of great powers, and the success of the late Count d'Aehrenthal. He may be called upon to continue the latter's policy, for he was his pupil, and owes his position largely to D'Aehrenthal, since he was promoted by the latter from the post of a mere secretary of embassy to the ambassadorship at St. Petersburg, where he proved a great success. He was attached for a time to Count Mensdorff's embassy in London, where he acquired not only a wonderful mastery of the English language, but also the warm friendship of Edward VII., who, quick, as usual, to appreciate Berchtold's coming man, made a point of summoning him each summer from his Castle of Buchau to join him at Marternbad, where he found much pleasure in his companionship. Berchtold is not only an exceedingly well-read man—in London he spent much of his time in the library of the British Museum, studying the biographies, the correspondence, letters and reminiscences of English and foreign statesmen and diplomats of the sixteenth and early nineteenth centuries—but is likewise a tremendously fond of fun, and when he finds himself among congenial spirits, becomes the leader of the revels to an extent that no one would have

The ball passed entirely through the foot. The young woman is resting comfortably, and as yet there is no clue to the person who did the shooting, which was evidently accidental.

THE MEN AND WOMEN Who Enjoy the Choicest Products of the World's Commerce.

Knowledge of What is Best More Important Than Wealth Without It.

It must be apparent to every one that qualities of the highest order are necessary to enable the best of the products of modern commerce to attain to universal acceptance. However loudly heralded, they may not hope for world-wide preeminence unless they meet with the general approval, not of individuals only, but of the many who have the happy faculty of selecting and enjoying the choicest products. Their commendation, consequently, becomes important to others, since to meet the requirements of the well informed of all countries the methods of manufacture must be of the most perfect order and the combination the most excellent of its kind. After thirty years of general usage, Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is everywhere accepted as the best of family laxatives. Its quality is due not only to the excellence of the laxative and carminative principles of plants known to act most beneficially on the system, but also to the method of manufacture of the California Fig Syrup Co., which ensures that uniformity and purity essential in a remedy intended for family use. It cleanses and sweetens the system effectually, when a laxative is needed, without any unpleasant after effects. To get the beneficial effects of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, buy of your druggist the genuine only, the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package; one size only, price, 60 cents per bottle.
